

Cadscan eyes up quality accreditation and new product range for 2017

Cadscan need to constantly develop innovative new products to grow in what is a competitive market place.

The Growth Hub has assisted them with specialist consultancy in order to meet the technical ISO13485 standards in order to achieve CE marking of their new medical products prior to the launch of these new products.

They also required assistance with reaching international market places so the Growth Hub brokered an introduction to the Department of International Trade to access specialist consultancy in this field.

The result of this work is forecasted to generate 5 new locally based jobs and increase turnover by 60% following the new product launch.

Managing Director Dr Alastair Buchanan says:

“It’s an incredibly exciting time for our business. We’re looking to gain some high quality accreditation to make sure we can sell our products in what has become an increasingly competitive sector. That’s a real business priority for us – and the Growth Hub has given us a massive leg up as we try and reach new markets and achieve some pretty ambitious growth targets.”

“The Growth Hub has also helped us prioritise the needs of the business and through them we have been able to tap into some of the expert advice offered by the government Department for International Trade.”

“The support we’ve received from the Growth Hub has been hugely beneficial because without these accreditations, it’s very difficult for us to grow our business. And we also need them to operate in the global market. We’re working on some fantastic products at the moment so, for us right now, all I’d say is....’watch this space!’”
